

Tattoo studios assume immense legal liability when participating in corporate hiring stunts without independent consent protocols.
Protecting against tech sector hubris requires an astonishing volume of defensive legal documentation