

Company founders often issue public apologies and offer removal cost coverage only after severe public backlash occurs.

Deep personal regret happens to be a highly scalable startup metric.