

Sterilization equipment requires routine biological spore testing to verify proper function.
The most advanced containment protocols are reserved for the routine maintenance check.