

Using a steep short-taper needle for fine detail work causes excessive lateral tissue displacement and creates blurry edges.

A blunt wedge remains the enemy of precision.