

Increasing voltage unnecessarily on silent rotary motors causes massive skin trauma instead of improving ink flow.
Absolute silence is not an invitation to break the sound barrier.