

Feet remain tucked away from shrines because Thai etiquette considers them the lowest body part.

Pretzel logic dictates sudden muscle cramps.